Reading Homework 1

Book 3 Unit 8

Passage A

A A school photography club wanted to buy a shared camera. Some members suggested asking everyone for the same amount of money immediately. Others were worried that a large payment would prevent students from joining the club. Before choosing a way to raise the money, the group listed what the camera needed to do. It had to take clear pictures for the school newspaper and be simple enough for beginners. An expensive professional model was not necessary for those tasks.

B Three members compared prices and brought their findings to the next meeting. They checked what was included with each camera, because a low advertised price did not always include a memory card or a protective bag. A teacher helped them make a table showing the total cost of a usable set. They also asked whether the camera could be repaired locally. The group chose a suitable model after discussing these details, rather than selecting the cheapest price printed on a website or the brand that one member liked most.

C To raise the money, members organized a small exhibition of their photographs. Visitors could buy postcards, but entering the exhibition was free. Students who could not contribute money helped arrange pictures or welcome guests. The club kept a record of income and expenses, including the cost of printing the postcards. Counting all the money received as profit would have given the wrong picture. At the following meeting, two members checked the record together and showed the receipts to anyone who wanted to see how the figures had been calculated.

Passage A

D The exhibition raised enough money for the planned camera set, with a small amount left over. The club agreed to keep the remaining money for future repairs instead of buying an extra item straight away. It also wrote simple borrowing rules. A member recorded when the camera was taken out and when it was returned. The equipment stayed at school overnight unless a teacher had agreed to a particular project. These arrangements were intended to make shared use clear, not to suggest that every borrower was likely to be careless.

E A term later, the club reviewed the purchase. Members had used the camera for several newspaper stories, and beginners had learned the basic controls. However, some students found it difficult to borrow the camera before popular events. The club changed its booking method so that members could see the available times in advance. It did not buy another camera without first checking whether a better schedule would help. The project showed that a successful shared purchase involves more than collecting enough money: people also need a clear purpose, understandable records and a practical way to use what they have bought.
