Passage C - What a Spotted Mars Rock Can Tell Us

A In July 2024, NASA's Perseverance rover examined a rock in an ancient river valley on Mars. Scientists called the rock Cheyava Falls. Its pale patches, surrounded by darker material, looked rather like leopard spots. The rover collected a sample and used instruments to study the rock. These observations became evidence for an investigation of a large question: did tiny living things once exist on Mars? The shape of the spots alone did not provide a complete answer.

B The rock contained carbon-based materials and minerals that interested the team. On Earth, some similar chemical changes can be connected with tiny organisms obtaining energy. This comparison could suggest a possible connection with life on Mars. However, the same minerals can also form without living things. Scientists needed to consider several explanations, rather than choose a biological one because it sounded exciting. The question concerned the processes that made the rock, not simply whether it looked unusual.

C In September 2025, NASA described the sample as containing potential biosignatures. A biosignature is a sign connected with life, and the word potential means that more information is needed. Scientists could believe that an explanation deserved attention without claiming it was already certain. Their research had reached a stage where observations could be examined and questioned by other specialists. The announcement did not say that the rover had seen an organism moving across the surface of Mars. A possible sign can concern life in the distant past. It need not show that something is alive in the same place at the time of observation.

Passage C - What a Spotted Mars Rock Can Tell Us

D The team also looked at explanations involving heat and acidic conditions. The rocks did not show signs of the high temperatures or acidity involved in some non-biological explanations. This made those explanations less likely in the reported work, but it did not prove that life was the cause. Scientists said they could not rule out processes without life. A possibility that seems unlikely still needs consideration when the conclusion would change our understanding of another planet.

E The rover had examined the sample with equipment on Mars. In the team's 2024 discussion, scientists explained why instruments in laboratories on Earth could provide further information about it. A returned sample could receive tests that were not available on the rover itself. People continue to wonder about life elsewhere, but interest and a confirmed discovery are different things. Cheyava Falls shows how a promising observation can lead to further questions about an actual rock and its history.

Put sentences A-C in order. Record the opening, then read all three sentences in the correct order. Do not read the letters.

11. Explain a cheaper alternative after acknowledging a suggestion.

Opening: I see why you suggested a museum visit.

A	That would leave nothing for classroom equipment.
B	The visit would use our whole budget.
C	An online tour could leave money for useful models.

12. Make a point before inviting another speaker.

Opening: Let me explain the main difficulty first.

A	This means everyone needs to wait for a turn.
B	Our group has only one telescope.
C	Would a booking timetable make that wait easier to manage?

13. Agree with a suggestion and explain a benefit.

A	We should therefore prepare an indoor alternative.
B	Without that clear sky, clouds could stop us seeing the planned objects.
C	It depends on a clear sky.

15. Recommend a solution and invite a response.

Opening: I have a suggestion for the younger visitors.

Questions 16-18 Follow the model

Use the model to help you make one focused paragraph of 4-5 sentences. Write key words, then record your answer.

16. A partner suggests an expensive museum trip. Acknowledge the idea, explain a concern and propose an alternative.

Model: I see your point about inviting an expert. A live explanation could be helpful. However, the expert may not be available on our date. We could prepare a recorded interview as an alternative.

17. Support a partner's practical idea. Add a reason, a detail and an invitation to respond.

Model: I agree that a booking list would help. Students would know when to use the telescope. We could give each pair five minutes. What do you think about testing it at the next meeting?

18. Politely add a concern to a group discussion and suggest how to address it.

Model: Could I just add one point? The demonstration room has only twenty seats. We could divide visitors into two groups. One group could explore a display while the other watches.

Use the model to help you make one focused paragraph of 4-5 sentences. Write key words, then record your answer.

19. Compare two ways to interest children in space. Recommend one for a short lesson.

Model: We could show a long documentary or use a simple model. The film would include more information. However, the model would let children ask questions as we explain it. I would choose the model for our short lesson.

20. Conclude a discussion with a recommendation, a reason and a check for agreement.

Model: To finish, I suggest an indoor telescope demonstration. It would not depend on clear weather. We could ask students to prepare one question each. Does everyone agree with that plan?

Writing Homework 3

Book 2 Unit 8

Questions 16-18 Follow the model

Use the model to help you make one focused paragraph of 4-5 sentences. Write your own answer with different details.

16. Feedback: five of eight beginners could not follow the written instructions. Support a picture guide using a that clause.

Model: The club should test a shorter demonstration. The practice survey shows that six of ten visitors found the talk too long. A shorter version could focus on one idea. The club could then ask whether visitors understood it.

17. Argue for an affordable space-learning activity. Use a purpose infinitive and one reason.

Model: The class could use models to explore the station’s design. Students could point to parts as they explain them. This would help because the parts are difficult to imagine from words alone. The activity could focus on one small section.

18. A planned outdoor event may face clouds. Write a short argument for a backup plan using because and so.

Model: The workshop needs extra instruction cards because one card may be difficult to share. Several groups will work at once, so each group should have a copy. This would reduce waiting. The teacher could collect the cards after the activity.

Questions 19-20 Follow the model

Use the model to help you make one focused paragraph of 4-5 sentences. Write your own answer with different details.

19. Evidence: experienced members completed a model task. Beginners have not tried it. Recommend the next step cautiously.

Model: The first survey included only adults. Its results therefore tell us little about children's preferences. I believe that the group should ask younger visitors too. Their answers could help improve the family activity.

20. Give a balanced opinion about inviting a live speaker instead of using a recording. Include a reason and a limitation.

Model: A live telescope demonstration would be useful for our class. Students could ask questions to understand the equipment. However, a recording would be easier to replay. I would choose the live session and provide short notes afterwards.
